What Do Men Live for.

When all is said and done, what do men live for? For the mere frivolous pleasures of life? They pall. For the joy of achievement of purposes? The time comes when they see no more worlds to conquer, or have nothing but vain regrets for failure to conquer. In the end no hope on earth remains save the children may press their father's battle to victory or may enter into the kingdom which he saw from the mountain top afar. But those who have no children because they willfully refrain from having them, or have them so feebly that they risk having none in the end—what have they to live for? What hope is theirs that makes life really worth living? Millions of men are finding every year that the incomes which seemed barely sufficient for themselves alone are sufficient to support wives and children and to build up estates as well. A man never knows what he can do until he is obliged to try.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Combination.

Nature puts up some queer human combinations with strangely incompatible ingredients. Most of us are so lazy we would like to put in all our time resting, and so ambitious that we can't rest when we get a chance.—Chicago News.

The Local Color Scheme.

"We are not yet ready to put your book on the market," said the publisher to the ambitious author.

"But it is printed. Illustrations and all," argued the author. "Why don't you go ahead and bind it, and?"

"There's the trouble. The fashion experts have not yet decided what is to be the popular shade this fall and we certainly do not want to risk binding the book in a color that will clash with the gown of the lady who is reading it, do we?"—Judge.

IN HAY HARVEST.

Plans For Returning the Hayfork, A Two Pole Stacker.

An Iowa correspondent sends to the Homestead a sketch of a plan in favor in his vicinity for pulling the hayfork back when putting hay in the barn.

Fig. 1 is a rope about one and a half times longer than the track, and it may be a half inch rope. Fig. 2 is a rope of about the same size that is about ten feet longer than the track. Rope 1 should have a hook in one end, which is fastened to the track A or a little above it. Bring the other end down and extend through the pulley E, draw it taut and fasten to a stake, B. Hook pulley C to the end of the track so it will not slip, then fasten rope 2 to the carrier so it will still run clear, then run it through the pulley C and down run it through the weight is fastened at E. The weight may be added or taken away from it so it will pull back the fork when the load has been released. It is better not to have the weight bring the fork back itself, but so it will assist and the fork can be easily pulled back with a slight pull. Upon the length of the barn will depend the size of the weight. This device does not add much to the draft.

The editor of the paper mentioned adds two other sketches of timely conveniences. The second and lower figure in the first cut shows another plan for returning the hayfork. An extra rope is attached to the fork at M, run through a pulley at N and out to a stake at P, then attached to the single-tree. This rope should have ten or twelve feet of slack. The hay rope is run around a pulley at S, then to T and finally to hitch at R. When the horse returns for another load the fork is returned by the horse without any efforts of the man.

The second cut illustrates a two poles stacker. The position of the poles shows them leaning against the two taut guy ropes so the fork hangs directly over the load. As the horse pulls on the rope with pulley attached a short distance from the ground the load of hay on the fork is drawn up to the pulley, and the pulling draws the poles over, as shown in the dotted lines, so the fork hangs over the stack when the trip is thrown and the load discharged on the stack.

A TWO POLE STACKER.

Ringling the Pigs.

How old should a pig be before you ring it? It should be at least three months old, but we have often found it necessary to ring pigs before they have attained that age. If the ground is wet they do a great amount of damage before they are that old, and we sometimes ring them when they are nine weeks old, but we do not like to do it if we can avoid it. The pig derives no benefit from the ringing, and we take the matter into consideration from a financial standpoint. When we think the time has arrived that the pig is doing the ground and itself more damage by rooting than we can damage the pig by ringing it, we pen him up and ring him. Sometimes it is pretty hard to decide just what is best to do, says an Ohio Farmer writer.

New Fertilizer.

Consul. Worman of Three Rivers writes that the Canadian agent in Norway reports from Christiania that a new fertilizing product, nitrate of calcium, concerning which he sent a full report under date of Jan. 4 last, is manufactured from the nitrogen of the atmosphere, and its price has been fixed at $4.13 per 2204 pounds to farmers, while Chile saltpeter costs them $5.33 for the same weight. Experiments last summer have proved that the two fertilizers are very nearly of equal value to plants. Just now the fertilizer should have special attention from those who have hitherto used kail from Germany, which product a German trust is advancing in price.—Consular Reports.

Not Caught.

Miss Romance—Oh, I just adore music. Old Baldie—You play, I believe? Miss Romance—Play and sing both. What sort of man ought a woman who loves music to marry? Old Baldie—Well—er—really, I can't say—a deaf one, I suppose.—London Tit-Bits.

KNIFE VS. CRIME.

Bandit Terror Completely Reformed by an Operation.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 18.—A despatch from Menominee, Mich., says that "Black Hart" Holsby, a noted bandit, who held the northern part of Wisconsin and Michigan in terror some years ago, has been reformed of criminal tendencies by an operation.

Holsby was sent to prison. It was believed his crimes were due to a diseased mind, and an operation was performed in the Iowa hospital.

Soon after his character changed and his criminal instincts seem to have disappeared. Holsby was sent up for life. A movement is now on foot to have him pardoned.

The torch of the statue of Liberty in New York harbor burns so dimly that it can scarcely be seen from passing vessels. This probably typifies liberty extinguished by graft in the lighting contract.—Atlanta Constitution.

Eighteen of this year's Harvard seniors, according to the list of their probable occupations, are going into journalism. This will relieve the anxiety of any who have been worrying about the permanence of the institution.—Boston Herald.

PITH AND POINT.

To be rich means to own a lot of dangerous toys.

Few men are big enough to keep their mouths shut.

Are you light on the trigger when it comes to speaking ill of people?

A man is always willing to admit that a woman can milk better than he can in order to flatter her into taking the work off his hands.

There isn't any distinction that can come to a man later in life as great as that he enjoyed as a boy because he was once almost drowned.

Giving parties is like washing dishes. By the time a woman thinks she has every one paid up she is invited again and has it all to do over again.—Aitchison Globe.

A Plausible Scamp.

"I suppose you lost your employment because of drink," said the severe housewife.

"Yes, lady," answered Plodding Pete. "I got me system full o' well water dat hadn't been boiled and de germs did de rest."—Washington Star.

Alfalfa Is "Easy."

With good seed, a proper seed bed and land adapted for growing the crop a careful farmer should be almost as sure of establishing a successful stand of alfalfa as the average farmer is of getting a stand of wheat or oats. This may seem like a strong statement, since failure to get a good stand of alfalfa has often been the experience of many farmers, especially those who were inexperienced in growing this crop. However, it is generally true that the longer alfalfa is raised on any farm the more readily it grows and the easier it becomes for the farmer to start the crop.—Ten Eyck.
